Mental Health Kits for Kids

When children experience traumatic events, such as being displaced or losing loved ones in Hurricane Helene, they have mental health needs that need to be addressed. Their parents and guardians are often so challenged by immediate needs that the children are left with a lot of feelings and inadequate ways to process those feelings.

Hayes Barton UMC is partnering with the MERCI Center in a pilot program to address the mental health needs of children in western North Carolina. We will be preparing Children's Comfort Kits to accompany flood buckets to help address the needs of children. We are collecting items now through Sunday, November 17th and welcome volunteers to help package the kits at Generous Helping, on December 4th.

We need your crayons!

Drop off your broken crayons at the Well and at the HBUMP reception desk throughout November.

Crayons will be sorted during Generous Helping on December 4th, and donated to The Crayon Initiative. The Crayon Initiative collects unwanted crayons, melts them down, and recasts them into new crayons. The new crayons are designed by occupational therapists and donated to children's hospitals and their art programs.

Please contact Ellen Safrit with any questions on how you can create your own Crayon Initiative Donation.
